COLLECT SOIL SAMPLES

After every storm there comes a lull or quiet. Certainly the storm of unfavorable weather for collecting soil samples was strong from fall of 1972 until spring of 1973. After the rush of spring planting comes the lull or time of reduced pressure. This late spring and early summer lull is a good time to collect soil samples in preparation for late summer and fall planting periods. Also, any soil areas not currently being used for production or occupied by crops that would interfere with taking soil samples are prime areas for sampling during this period.

Although all areas for seeding or planting this fall should be sampled, any area that has not been limed within 3 years, which will be used in barley production, should receive first priority in sampling. Barley needs a favorable soil reaction, pH 6.2 to 6.6, and crop failure is the rule, rather than the exception, where the crop is seeded on soils with pH 6.0 and lower.

Prepare to meet your soil needs prior to the time materials will be needed. Collect soil samples now.

each of the summer socials was given a title in keeping with the theme. June will host a "Steak - LOVEr's Cook-out"; July will focus on a "Land LOVEr's Pool Party" and August will feature a "We LOVE Bob Sigma Phi - Coke Party" as part of the chapter's Beginning Day activities.
